District Profile

The current school district is comprised of three schools: Kernville Elementary School, Woodrow W. Wallace Elementary School, and Woodrow W. Wallace Junior High School.

Kernville Elementary School is located in Kernville. It is the newest school plant in the district. It was built as a K-6 school in 1968.

Woodrow W. Wallace Elementary School was dedicated on November 21, 1953 as Kernville Elementary School. The school was given its current name November 21, 1966, thus allowing the Kernville name to be used when the new school was built in Kernville. Originally Wallace Elementary was a K-8 school. The school changed to its current K-6 status when a separate junior high was created in Fall, 1985.

Woodrow W. Wallace Junior High School separated from Wallace Elementary in 1985. The junior high and the elementary school share the same campus, but they are now considered separate schools.

In addition to building more classroom facilities as enrollment increased, a gymnasium was added to the campus in 1978. To accommodate the increase in student population at the school site a new library building was added in July 1990.
